Emily Scudi of Dumont's Lincoln School is the top award winner in the ages 7 to 9 category of ArtStamps' 2010 National Artistic Achievement Awards for her artwork pictured here.

ArtStamps is a school or group fundraising company that turns student artwork into U.S. postage stamps and other products.

ArtStamps honored 50 students throughout the nation in five age categories, who were the winners of its 2010 National Artistic Achievement Awards based on the originality and creativity of their artwork.

Scudi was selected as the top award winner in the ages 7 to 9 category, winning a cash prize of $250.

ArtStamps developed this award to promote creativity in schools and build children's self esteem. Chosen from thousands of pieces of artwork, the NAAA winners have achieved an honored distinction.
